

FIZZING IN THE CITY

The Ramos Gin Fizz has been a favorite of the Crescent City since the late 1880s. Created by Henry C. Ramos, it gets its unique flavoring from orange flower water and its froth from beaten egg whites.

Ramos bought the Imperial Cabinet Saloon (at the corner of Carondelet and Gravier streets) in 1888, and it was there that his Gin Fizz earned its reputation.

STYLES OF GIN

London Dry

Don't let the name fool you, even though London Dry originated in England, this style is made all over the world. The flavor profile is typically very Juniper focused, but each gin is steeped with many different herbs and citrus as well. No two gins are the same. There cannot be any artificial flavors or sweeteners added.

New Western

Also known as New American, was coined in 2009 although the actual style started in 1995. This style is still dry, but the main flavor is not typically Juniper. New Western style allows for distillers to experiment with flavors.

Plymouth

Plymouth is both a name and a style of gin that has been around since 1793. The distillery is one of the oldest recorded in the U.K. and the building dates back to the early 1400s. The flavor profile is drier than London Dry and has a little bit of a spicy finish.

Old Tom

Old Tom is a descendent of the "Bathtub Gin" era, which started in the 16th century. The style was originally a sweetened style of gin, with bolder flavors than London Dry. Old Tom is typically the go-to for pre-prohibition cocktails.

Genever

This style started in Holland back in the 16th century. The grains are turned into a malt wine spirit, which becomes the main flavor profile of the gin. Genever is considered to have an even richer flavor than Old Tom.
