All Tennessee distillers must use the Lincoln County Process if they wish to call their products Tennessee whiskeys, with the lone exception of Prichard's-- which ironically is one of just two Tennessee distillers still located in Lincoln County.

DID YOU KNOW?

The main difference between Irish and Scottish whiskey (Scotch) comes down to how they're made?

Irish whiskey is typically triple-distilled, making it smoother, while Scotch is usually distilled twice, giving it a bolder, smokier flavor—especially if it's a peated whisky. Plus, Scotch whisky is spelled without the “e,” while Irish whiskey keeps the “e” in the name!

There's a debate on where the martini was originally created, but we can thank Henry Craddock for popularizing the martini within the Savoy Cocktail Book in the 1930's.
